The new museum is housed in the former Municipal Hospital, a historic colonial structure in Santurce, a suburb of nearby San Juan.

The existing 40,000sf building was completely restored with an addition culminating in a 110,000sf museum and education center. The museum provides extensive permanent and changing galleries with an 800 seat theater, food service facilities and a great-hall atrium. Completed in the Spring of 2000, this project is a joint venture with The Museum Group, a local architectural firm in Puerto Rico.
